

TORONTO - The Toronto Railway Museum and Master of Museum Studies candidates from the Faculty of Information at the University of Toronto present Uncovering Union, a new online exhibition. This virtual exhibit will go live on Monday, April 20.

Uncovering Union delves into nine different stories about Toronto's iconic train station. Visitors to the exhibit will travel back to the station's opening day in 1927, reminisce about Eaton's Santa Claus parade, discover life as a Red Cap Porter, and more. Virtual visitors can find the exhibition at www.UncoveringUnionTRM.ca, which will go live on Monday, April 20.

In collaboration with the University of Toronto's Faculty of Information, Uncovering Union will let Toronto Railway Museum visitors explore over ninety years of Toronto's railway history from home. This exhibit has the flexibility to be accessed from anywhere by digital visitors.

The Toronto Railway Museum (TRM) is temporarily closed due to COVID-19, though remains active online through social media channels. The museum is operated by the Toronto Railway Historical Association, a registered charitable organization. TRM has been located in John Street Roundhouse since 2010, with exhibits open year round and seasonal miniature train ride and tours.
