Toronto Railway Museum

Social Media Community Guidelines

The Toronto Railway Museum (TRM) is the repository of the City's vibrant railway history. Our mission is simple: to connect people to the secret history of rail in Toronto and tell the story of those who propelled the city from sleepy town into our nation's economic engine.

The social media pages monitored by the Toronto Railway Museum are intended to be public spaces of education and conversation. We encourage our online community to engage in respectful discussions on our social media channels. When commenting, please keep comments relevant to the original post.

Though we do not review or moderate all comments, we reserve the right to remove any content posted that does not adhere to this policy, and block or report users who violate our community guidelines. The following will not be tolerated:

- Threats of any kind
- Profane language or content
- Messages that contain spam, advertising or include links to other sites. (Note that non-commercial links that are relevant to the topic or another comment are acceptable).
- Hate language, including based on race, ethnicity, nationality, gender, sexuality, religion, age, education, or physicality
- Illegal activities
- Anything that compromises the safety of individuals

By posting, commenting, or replying on one of our posts on our social media channels, you are agreeing to abide by these Social Media Community Guidelines and further agreeing to comply with the social media guidelines imposed by the particular social media platform you are utilizing. Failure to follow these standards may lead to your content being hidden, deleted, or reported. Moderators may also issue a warning, or, in extreme cases, block your account.

We thank you for being a part of our online community and engaging in thoughtful and respectful dialogue on our social media channels. If you have questions regarding these Social Media Community Guidelines, please contact manager@trha.ca.
